Once again, the people of Shady Cove are challenged with a land use proposal where the information they need to respond will not be available until after the deadline set for them to respond. A notice is going out to adjacent property owners for the subject proposal this week that carries a response date of August 19. Simultaneously, a notice will be going out to the public on August 4 in the URI that states the application and related documents will be available for review by August 20. The response date is August 19, but the public can't see what they are responding to until the 20th.

Isn't there some way to fix this? Apparently my idea wasn't good enough. I can't imagine there's no one else with any ideas of how to correct this problem.
